THE SUGAR PROBLEM

CANNING SEASON BRINGS MANY REQUESTS FROM CANNERS

SOME RULES TO FOLLOW

Housekeepers Are Urged to Adopt Suggestions by Food Board For Using Less Sugar In Process

With two telephones, an office clerk and the food administrator himself, the inquiries and complaints in connection with the desire to secure sugar are so numerous that the office is taxed to handle them all. The fruit canning season is given as the reason scores of women are daily asking permits to purchase quantities in excess of the normal allowance. Few dealers are selling more than this quantity to their customers despite the fact that they may have secured a permit to purchase a larger amount. Food Administrator F. P. Robinson said this morning that but few of those who had applied for permits to purchase sugar for canning had tried the recipes issued by the government whereby a large saving in sugar may be made.

According to the Home Conservation department of the food administration there are three things which the average American housekeeper, accustomed to preserving fruit in her own home, should do to help in a sugar conservation program. They are: 1. Preserve a part of the supply by methods requiring no sugar. 2. Preserve a part of the supply with a greatly reduced quantity of sugar. 3. Preserve a part of the supply by replacing some of the sugar ordinarily used with other sweeteners.

Where no sugar is used fruits may be canned by the usual methods, using for the liquid water alone instead of syrup.

Fruits canned without sugar are not as fine either in texture or in flavor as those in which a moderate amount of sugar is used. This is a war measure and since fruit and not sugar is the food to be preserved we must make the sacrifice willingly. The resulting product is as wholesome as the sweetened one would be and it will keep equally well.

When little sugar is used, if moderate amounts of sugar are obtainable and no individual uses more than a reasonable share of the present supply, part of the fruit may be preserved with some sugar.

Fruit may be canned with one-half or one-fourth the usual amount of sugar.

The sweetness of the syrup in which fruits are canned may be reduced. Frequently this improves the quality and real palatability of the product.

Use other sweeteners instead of sugar. If honey is obtainable it may be used, weight for weight, to replace a part or all of the sugar in any given recipe except in jelly making. It is equally as sweet as sugar and may give the mixture a decidedly honey flavor. Three-fourths of a cup of honey weighs about as much as a cup of sugar.

BUSINESS OF WINNING WAR

Dealers Will Not Suffer If They Will Follow Suggestions of War Industries Board, Manufacturer Says

The manner in which the War Industries Board is asking cooperation of manufacturers and dealers is indicated in a letter from the Nettleton Shoe Co., of Syracuse, N. Y., to the Bee Hive Shoe Store, in which they state that in order to be placed on the priorities list for coal it is necessary that they pledge to devote their products to essential uses only and to procure from all dealers, as far as possible, a pledge that all possible economy and conservation by limiting sales and purchases by intelligently repairing and to cooperate in the conservation of hide and leather goods.

The manufacturers state: "It is very evident that we are approaching a time in the business of winning this war when we must all shape our courses along lines that will be more or less restricted and perhaps troublesome. * * * We believe that the conservative course is the wisest under present conditions and we do not believe that any dealer will suffer by conducting his business in line with the suggestions of the War Industries Board."

OUR AIRMEN THERE

FIRST AMERICAN SQUADRON ABOVE LINES OF THE FOE

20,000 FEET IN THE AIR

Eighteen of Them Were Run by Liberty Motors—U. S. Begins War On Huns From the Clouds

The first all-American air squadron, composed of American-built De Haviland airplanes, equipped with Liberty motors and piloted by American aviators, has been sent into action against the enemy on the western front. In command of Brigadier General B. F. Foulois, who was in the lead plane of the lead flight this American squadron of eighteen De Havilands crossed over the German lines, penetrated for miles back of the German positions and returned without a single casualty or mishap of any description.

The resistance which the Germans offered, the efforts of Germany's crack aviators to down or disperse the squadron, or the attempts of the German anti-aircraft guns to break up the flight are not yet reported by General Pershing, whose cablegram to Secretary Baker merely announces the successful result.

It is assumed, however, that the Germans undoubtedly made desperate efforts to prevent the carrying out of this important reconnaissance flight, for it is known that General Foulois led the three V-shaped American squadrons of six machines each over a portion of the German line where the battle has been surging, and where it was of extreme importance to the Germans not to permit the enemy to ascertain what was going on behind the lines.

General Foulois' squadron formed part of a wing of one of General Pershing's divisions now doing such conspicuous work. Each machine was equipped with a pilot and an observer. Two guns were installed to shoot through the propellors and two more are in position to fire abaft.

Lieutenant Blair Thaw, brother of William Thaw, was in command of one of the machines, but the rest of the personnel is not so far given in the cable dispatches.

The formation used called for three groups of six planes each, it is understood, which made the squadron in flight resemble the arrow formation of the wild geese. The altitude of approximately 20,000 feet made it possible for the De Havilands to be at their best, for information from Pershing's headquarters shows that the De Havilands at 20,000 feet, "plays all around" the Spad, the Nieuport and other machines.

The duration of the flight behind the enemy lines was probably about fifteen minutes, according to the aeronautical experts here in close touch with conditions abroad. This is quite sufficient time for the observers to bring back information of distinct value concerning the movements behind the German lines.

Troop formation, indications of further retreat or attempts by the enemy to secretly mass troops are all disclosed by these reconnaissance flights, which have now become such an important factor in the war.

General Foulois' flight marks the first instance where an all-American squadron has been in action against the enemy, but it is fully expected now that this and other squadrons will be heard from frequently.

There are several all-American squadrons formed now and still others are in the process of formation. A wing—as it is called—is generally composed of about six squadrons.

The number of wings or squadrons attached to a division is variable as this depends primarily on the character of work the division is doing. On quiet sectors there may be few airplane squadrons in operation with a division, but when the fighting is surging the airplanes concentrate in great numbers to assist the divisions actually engaged or about to become engaged.

The news of General Foulois' successful flight was received with undisguised elation by aeronautical officers here. To them it marks the beginning of America's active part in the aerial war, in the sense that has put to the test American-built planes operated by American-trained aviators. As one officer stated last night: "We've now got all-American planes with all-American motors and all-American pilots, and we have reached the stage where this all-American combination has been actually sent out against the enemy. All that remains now is to increase numbers all along the line."

Officers here are particularly gratified that the much-criticised de Haviland "4" has been the machine to demonstrate its fitness for service at this critical time.

As a matter of fact, most of the criticism aimed at the de Haviland "4" by well-meaning but uninformed persons in the United States has never been justified in the opinion of the aeronautical experts here.

The war department has known for some time that these de Havilands, as turned out by the factories, did not absolutely meet the requirements of General Pershing. But they knew it was a simple matter for the desired changes to be made after the de Havilands reached their destination. These changes have been made on the field by Pershing's men and it would be possible for them to continue making necessary changes as new machines arrive. But to obviate this minor difficulty Secretary Baker has ordered that the changes desired by General Pershing be made before the machines leave the factory. That is being done now.

A GRATEFUL MOTHER

MRS. MARY K. RIFFLE GETS LETTER FROM FRENCH PROTEGE

HER PICTURE ENCLOSED

Widow, at Work In Tobacco Factory, Makes Cigarettes for French and American Soldiers

Mrs. Mary Kost Riffle, living southwest of the city, has recently adopted a French war orphan on the "marraine" or godmother plan, paying $36 per year through the French war orphan relief society in this country for the care of an orphan.

A few days ago Mrs. Riffle received a letter from her little protege, who is named Leona Darmony and a picture of the little girl. The letter was written by the mother of the child. It was told in French and has been translated by Miss Frances Smith, head of the department of English in the San Antonio, Texas, high school.

Since Mrs. Riffle has learned the name and address of the little orphan she is preparing to be an ideal godmother to the child by sending gifts and doing everything she can to add to the comfort and pleasure of the child.

The letter in which the mother tells of their troubles and her present situation follows:

"Orleans, July 17.

"Dear Madam: I write to acknowledge your lovely gift which you have made to my little daughter, a war orphan, whose dear papa was killed in the battle of Arras.

I am sending you the picture of my little Leona. She is very sweet and learns very well with help. She is very capable. She will write you a long letter within a few days. I work at the tobacco factory. I make cigarettes for our unfortunate men and our allies. In that way I manage to get along very well.

"We have just celebrated with your soldiers the Fourth and the Fourteenth of July. We were very glad to have them with us, for they make such a fine appearance that we believe that at last we see our own once more. A sad life to which one must submit! For what distress and what sorrow this war has caused! What a consolation to have the little girl to comfort me, for life is hard.

"I work, I direct my little girl in the right path and that is all the happiness that I can have.

Madam, I am going to leave you in the hope of hearing from you some time. I close by sending you my best regards, as does my little daughter, who is very fortunate in having a new godmother.

EAST OF THE RIVER THE FRENCH ARE AT THE OISE, HAVING TAKEN SIX TOWNS

3,000 PRISONERS CAPTURED

Attacking This Morning Between the Somme and Ancre, the British Are Extending Yesterday's Front—American Aviators Are Busily Engaged

Paris, Aug. 22.—Not since Von Kluck and his German hordes were hurled back from the gates of Paris in the early days of the war has the news from the front been of such tremendous importance and such big promise as is contained today in the dispatches of the Allied operations between Soissons and Arras. With his drives between the Oise and the Aisne rivers and between the Ancre and the Scarpe under full headway, General Foch has renewed the Picardy offensive and the British are attacking between the Somme and Albert and the French are lunging forward again in the Lasigny sector. The combined attacks are being pushed along a front which covers an aggregate of upwards of seventy-five miles and has shaken the German battle line all the way from Reims to the coast. In fact, military commentators see signs of the possible withdrawal of the enemy from the advanced sectors as far north as the Swiss border. German withdrawals on the western front are believed to be preliminary to a big retirement similar to a retreat to the so-called Hindenburg line.

London, Aug. 22.—Another big offensive movement was begun today by the British who attacked this morning between the Somme and the Ancre. General Haig also reports that the prisoners taken in yesterday's offensive north of the Ancre numbered between 2,000 and 3,000. Today's new blow by the British falls just below where General Byng swept forward yesterday. The British are really just extending yesterday's battle front.. Further progress for the British northeast of Merville is also announced. British troops are in the outskirts of Nufbarouine.

Paris, Aug. 22.—Six more towns have been wrested from the Germans by the French and Noyon is nearly surrounded by French troops. The war office report stated that the French have pressed forward to the border of the Oise river east of Noyon. The towns captured are Leplemeont, Theiscourt, Ancourtville, Bourguignon, and St. Paul-Auxbois. The French also have reached the Ailette river at one place.

American aviators shot down two Boche planes during two flights in the Lorraine sector Wednesday evening while American bombers raided Longuon and Unleroman successfully.

More than 100,000 prisoners have been captured by the British and Americans since July 18, the Echo de Paris estimated today.

The early capture of Noyon is forecast.

THE COMPANIONABLE WOMAN.

Men marry for companionship; some get it and some do not. No woman who is dragged down with ailments peculiar to her sex can be a fit and happy companion for any man. There is, however, one tried and true remedy for such conditions in that famous old root and herb medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and no woman who is afflicted with displacement, irregularities, inflammation, ulceration, backache, headaches, nervousness or "the blues," should rest until she has given this good old-fashioned remedy a trial. MOLINE
UNIVERSAL TRACTOR
It Solves The Farm Help Problem

The design and construction of a Moline Universal Tractor is such that 98 per cent of its total weight is placed on the two big drive wheels, giving it distinctive features over all other tractors which might be enumerated as follows:

(1) Light in weight.
(2) Close coupled to implement.
(3) One man operates both tractor and implement.
(4) Easy to operate.
(5) Ample clearance for cultivation.

Conservatively rated in horse power and weighing 3,380 lbs which is 1500 to 2000 lbs less than other tractors capable of doing same amount of work.

Does not pack the soil, goes where heavy tractors cannot go, and can be used for light work more economically than horses, therefore, all the belt work and draft work may be done with this wonderful little farm giant.

Every day farmers are making inquiry for farm power machinery to eliminate HORSE and MAN POWER, which are expensive and unsatisfactory.

Many are buying power machinery which will make production more economical and satisfactory. You should begin to investigate to-TODAY. Your opportunity is NOW. Come and make your arrangements for your tractor this fall to become thoroughly acquainted with it for spring work besides having it to do your FALL PLOWING, SEEDING, CORN HARVESTING, SILO FILLING and GRINDING FEED this winter. J. J. at Hall's Implement store will give you his advices about this masterly piece of farm equipment.

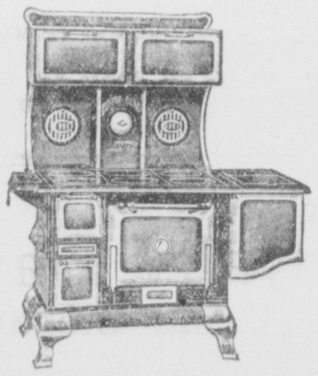
The Copper Clad Range

We want to call your attention to a range which we believe is as near perfection as is possible to make a stove.

The Copper-Clad Range is lined with copper. The copper being placed between the outside of the stove and the asbestos lining, with an air space which prevents any moisture coming in contact with the outside iron of the stove—therefore the Copper-Clad Range CANNOT RUST FROM THE INSIDE.

Malleable iron construction as applied to Copper-Clad Ranges is superior in every particular to cast iron. By the use of this unbreakable material, all parts are securely riveted together making airtight joints. The air space or thermo construction of the body and flues conserves heat, and the Copper-Clad is

A Wonderful Fuel Saver



The fire box of the Copper-Clad range is so made as to use the least fuel with the greatest heat. The linings of the fire box being heavier than any ordinary stove, and of the best grade of gray iron obtainable.

These and many other features make the Copper-Clad Range well worth every dollar of its cost. If there were better stoves we would try to sell them—but we are satisfied with the Copper-Clad and we know you will also be satisfied if you buy one.

The Joy Of Coming Motherhood

A Wonderful Remedy That is a Natural Aid and Relieves the Tension.

The expectant mother revolves in her mind all we understand by destiny. And it is of the utmost importance that her physical comfort be our first thought.

There is a most splendid remedy for this purpose, known as Mother's Friend. It is applied over the muscles of the stomach, gently rubbed in, and at once penetrates to relieve strain on nerves, cords and ligaments. It makes the muscles so pliant that they expand easily when baby arrives and pain and danger at the crisis is naturally less.

Mother's Friend is for external use only, is absolutely safe and wonderfully effective. It enables the expectant mother to preserve her health and strength and she remains a pretty mother by having avoided the suffering and danger which would otherwise accompany such an occasion. Every nerve, muscle and tendon is thoroughly lubricated.

Mother's Friend is prepared by the Bradfield Regulator Co., Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. They will mail you an intensely interesting "Motherhood Book." Write them to send it to you, and in the meantime send or phone to your druggist today for a bottle of Mother's Friend.

Every woman should aid nature in her glorious work. Mother's Friend makes it
